BOOK REVIEWS

LAW REFORM IN THE MUSLIM WORLD

by Norman Anderson,
University of London 1976. £6

This is a book on law reform in the Muslim world by the acknowledged master on the subject, Sir Norman Anderson, who has recently retired as Professor of Islamic law in the University of London and Director of the Institute of Post-graduate Legal Studies, London. In this book he has tried to bring together and assess the various changes that have brought about in Muslim countries and view them as "part of a movement which now embraces the whole Muslim world." Students of Islamic law must feel grateful to Professor Anderson for bringing together in a book and bringing up to the date the various accounts which he had given from time to time of these movements for reform in the Muslim world.

There are only a few points on which a Muslim lawyer would want to join issue with Prof. Anderson in this book. He follows Hugronje in giving a paramount place to "ijma" as a source of Muslim law and at page 6 of the book he says in effect that the Quran, the Sunnah of the Prophet and the ijma or consensus of the great jurists, "were accepted as wholly authoritative." The Muslim lawyer would prefer to say with Imam Shafii that only the Quran and the Sunnah are the "wholly authoritative" sources of the Muslim law. Again Professor Anderson follows the late Dr. Schacht in stating at p. 8 that the Muslim law is "derived primarily from the raw material of the existing customary law and practice, which was worked through and systematised by the scholar jurists in the light of such Islamic teaching as was already current." This view is as Professor Anderson himself points out opposed to the views of Muslim writers, some of whose researches appear to have been ignored by non-Muslim scholars. In this respect perhaps the Muslim scholar can appreciate better the reference to the Holy Quran and Sunnah in the Constitution of Pakistan, which Professor Anderson gives at p. 175f. of this book. It might be pertinent to note that the administration of Muslim law enactment in the State of Perlis in Malaysia also refers to the Holy Quran and the Sunnah as the sources of Islamic law.

Professor Anderson makes a penetrating remark when he says at p. 36 of the book that "it has always been a far more heinous sin to deny or question the divine revelation than to fail to obey it." So it seemed preferable to continue to pay lip service to an inviolate Sharia as the only law of
