BOOK REVIEWS

A HISTORY OF ISLAMIC LAW

Paperback Edition 1978

by Professor N.J. Coulson

[Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 1978]

Professor Coulson's History of Islamic Law was first published in 1964. It is now published in a paperback edition without any revision or addition. This to a certain extent detracts from its value and the general reader, for whom it is presumably meant, might be misled into thinking that there have been no advances in this field since 1964. Professor Coulson is the Professor of Oriental Laws at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London and is acknowledged in the West as an authority on Muslim Law.

In the introduction to the book Professor Coulson tries to set out the role of legal history in Muslim jurisprudence. He says that Muslim jurisprudence, in its traditional form "provides a much more extreme example of a science divorced from historical considerations. Law in the classical Islamic theory is the revealed will of God, a divinely ordained system preceding and not preceded by the Muslim State, controlling and not controlled by Muslim Society". Prof. Coulson knows, of course, that there are traditional books on the history of the Islamic Law but he says that these merely dealt with the process of growth of the discovery and function of the divine law. The process is "seen in complete isolation from the historical development of society as such. The role of the individual jurist is measured by the purely subjective standard of its intrinsic worth in the process of discovery of the Divine command. It is not considered in the light of any external criteria or in its relationship to the circumstance of particular epochs or localities. In this sense the traditional picture of the growth of Islamic Law completely lacks the dimensions of historical depth". "Muslim Legal Philosophy" he says "has been essentially the elaboration and the analysis of the Sharia Law in abstracto rather than a science of the positive law emanating from judicial tribunals. In short the function of Muslim juris-
